A MESSAGE FROM
WAYNE S. BROWN
MOT PRESIDENT AND CEO

As Michigan Opera Theatre (MOT) embarks on a new decade of artistic excellence, we are thrilled to begin our 2022 dance season with a series of performances from Dance Theatre of Harlem that represent the essence of the human spirit.

Dance Theatre of Harlem’s (DTH) return to the Opera House is a special occasion as the groundbreaking company was among the last performances in our venue before the start of the COVID-19 pandemic. Their return symbolizes hope in these uncertain times and an unwavering commitment to the arts. The performances include the world premiere of Higher Ground, a new work by Resident Choreographer Robert Garland. Having the world premiere of this ballet in Detroit, which features music from Stevie Wonder, is especially meaningful to our community as it is the birthplace of Motown Records and the city where Wonder started his storied career.

Both DTH and MOT are celebrating golden anniversaries while looking forward to what the next 50 years will bring for each company. The upcoming performances mark the seventh residency of DTH at the Detroit Opera House and we look forward to continuing our long-standing relationship with the company, which began nearly 20 years ago.

Finally, we express our appreciation to our sponsors, without whom this performance would not have been possible: Ford Motor Company Fund, New England Foundation for the Arts, MGM Grand Detroit, Richard & Joanne Brodie, Marvin, Betty, and Joanne Danto Family Foundation, Maxine & Stuart Frankel Foundation and Kevin Dennis & Jeremy Zeltzer. Additionally, I’d like to express my deepest gratitude to Robin Terry, chairperson and CEO of the Motown Museum, for their collaboration and support of DTH’s Detroit residency.

We are eager to safely welcome audiences back into our performance venue. It has been a long intermission and we appreciate your return to the Detroit Opera House!

WAYNE S. BROWN
MOT President and CEO
Arthur Mitchell was a force of nature. Born and raised in Harlem, Arthur Mitchell was committed to equality and creating opportunity for people of color. He often said “either you hit the high C, or you don’t hit the high C,” and it has nothing to do with the color of your skin. Mr. Mitchell made history as the first African-American principal dancer with New York City Ballet, and enjoyed a successful career under the tutelage of George Balanchine. In 1969, Mr. Mitchell and ballet master Karel Shook co-founded the Dance Theatre of Harlem. Beginning with training and rehearsals in the basement of a church in Harlem, DTH evolved into a professional school and company that would tour the world to great acclaim.

Because of Mr. Mitchell’s heritage as a disciple of George Balanchine, DTH is rooted in the neoclassical style. Known for its passionate and dramatic interpretations, touring internationally to celebrate African-American culture through dance, DTH will perform a mixed-repertoire program which includes the world premiere of Robert Garland’s Higher Ground performed to music from Detroit icon, Stevie Wonder; Passage, a ballet which speaks to the resilience and determination of the human spirit; and a stunning piece Balamouk choreographed by Annabelle Lopez Ochoa, a ballet that is rich with multicultural movements, textures, and sounds. All three ballets celebrate Mr. Mitchell’s vision of ballet as an art form that pushes boundaries while showcasing the athleticism and discipline of classical ballet technique.

Thank you for celebrating this return of dance to the stage of the Detroit Opera House with us. We look forward to seeing you again in March when we present the Detroit premiere of Doña Perón: The Rise and Fall of a Diva. Featuring the choreography of Annabelle Lopez Ochoa, this new full-length ballet celebrates one of the most spellbinding women of South American history.

As a child, growing up in the 1970’s, it was becoming increasingly clear that Dr. King’s world, his “Beloved Community,” was much farther off than we realized. His prescient statement that he “may not get there with you” created for me a haunting awareness, coupled with a cultural anxiety, that lingers even to this day. I wondered in 2018 if these thoughts were on the mind of Arthur Mitchell, Dance Theatre of Harlem’s Founder, as he drifted off into an eternal sleep.

It has been said that African American people are the conscience of America. If that be so, then Stevie Wonder was, and still is, the conscience of Black America. His music loved us, taught us, admonished us, held us up, broke us down and turned us around. It was not surprising to me that the music of Wonder served as a fitting background musical theme in the culminating events leading up to, and throughout the election of the first African American President of the United States. Former President Barack Obama has called Wonder his “musical hero”; Mr. Wonder’s “Signed, Sealed, Delivered I’m Yours,” served as the closing soundtrack the final night of the Democratic National Convention that election year.

The ballet Higher Ground represents for me a Sankofa-esque reflection on our current times. From his song “You Haven’t Done Nothing,” composed to address an impending impeachment of former President Richard Nixon, to the complicated reflections on faith and social justice in “(Heaven Is) 10 Zillion Light Years Away,” the questions raised by Wonder within this music are wholly applicable today.

His Village Ghetto Land, reveals Mr. Wonder as an early master of the technique loosely referred to as “bricolage” juxtaposes lyrics outlining the horrors of urban blight and poverty, brilliantly contrasted by a sweet, classical cadence (or “recitative”) worthy of Verdi or Mozart.
His “Saturn,” moves towards heavenly solutions, and yearning for an entirely different world; while Higher Ground aggressively moves towards that goal in an entirely different way.

The music’s cultural relevance and timeless messages are crucial to understating art that directly addresses current social issues and politics. I’m thrilled to premiere Higher Ground in Detroit, which is not only the birthplace of Motown and Mr. Wonder’s sound, but a city I gratefully performed in many times as a principal dancer with Dance Theatre of Harlem (DTH) under our then Founder/Artistic Director Arthur Mitchell.

I’m proud to contribute a work that continues the philosophy and vision of Arthur Mitchell, and ultimately share his philosophy and vision with current and future generations to come.

In March of 2020, Dance Theatre of Harlem was set to perform at the Detroit Opera House and premiere Passage – a new ballet choreographed by Claudia Schreier with a commissioned score by Jessie Montgomery. The work offers a moving reflection on the fortitude of the human spirit, created in recognition of the 400th anniversary of the arrival of enslaved Africans to Virginia in 1619.

In preparation for that performance, MOT spoke with the creative team at the Charles H. Wright Museum of African American History in February of 2020. Though performances were canceled due to COVID-19, we look forward to the return of Dance Theatre of Harlem to Detroit and reassembled the creative team in December of 2020 to come back and talk with us again about the work on Passage. We were joined by choreographer Claudia Schreier and composer Jessie Montgomery. The panel was moderated by Wayne State University Assistant Professor Dr. Jennifer Gómez. That conversation has been edited for length. For the full conversation, visit MichiganOpera.org.

Dr. Jennifer Gómez

Thanks for joining us at MOT at Home today and it's nice to have a little bit of a reunion. We ran this panel back in February 2020, which already seems like a lifetime ago at the Charles Wright Museum of African American History. At that time, we were preparing for Dance Theatre of Harlem to come to Michigan Opera Theatre and perform Passage for us. And just maybe two weeks after we did this panel, the world shut down and for everybody’s safety, Dance Theatre of Harlem didn’t perform. So we’re excited to kind of reintegrate, redo this panel here tonight for MOT at Home and this new space, new way, this new life – looking forward to Dance Theatre of Harlem performing Passage here in Detroit at Michigan Opera Theatre when we can. So while we welcome Claudia Schreier... and Jessie Montgomery, I am Dr. Jennifer Gómez, you’re fearless moderator and we’ll just go ahead and dive in. The first question I have for both of you and maybe a question more for Claudia, can you give a brief summary of our synopsis of Passage and what people can expect when they see the show back when the world is open again?

Claudia Schreier
Absolutely and thank you so much for doing this for us today. Passage is a ballet that I created last year, which feels like a lifetime ago, in collaboration with Jessie. It’s about 18 to 20 minutes long. It’s for 12 dancers, six men and six women, and it is ultimately about the perseverance and fortitude of the human spirit. It was commissioned by the Virginia Arts Festival on American Evolution to commemorate the 400th anniversary of the first arrival of enslaved Africans to North America. And so in abstract it speaks to this period in our nation’s history and creates a through line to the ideals and to what we are continuing to experience and contend with today.

Dr. Jennifer Gómez
And Jessie, can you speak to, as a composer, the type of music and the kind of experience that people would get when they come and see Passage?

Jessie Montgomery
Sure. And again, thank you, Jennifer, for being here. And thanks Claudia. Glad that we can be here and look at this piece and talk about it again. This piece was very much in collaboration with Claudia. We had like, you know, the steps but it wasn’t like music first than dance. Well, there was some music first, and then there was dance that went along with it. And then there was music and dance that started to get worked on together simultaneously, that we sort of reworked the form as the piece was in development. And so musically, I was really trying to underpin this story that sort of emerged naturally out of Claudia’s choreography. We approached it from the perspective of highlighting the idea of the human spirit overcoming trials, in essence, but I was thinking pretty cinematically – in a lot of ways in terms of how you carry the listener, the viewer along. Actually, there’s some sort of traditional ballet form that's underpinning the whole structure of the piece. So we're really sort of working in both these traditional forms and also sort of looking at orchestration in a different way, and also musical storytelling in a different way.

Dr. Jennifer Gómez

We know that the Co-founder and Artistic Director Emeritus Mr. Arthur Mitchell passed away September 2018 and Passage was being set, correct me, just before and then just after he passed. Can you speak to what that was like in being in the Dance Theatre of Harlem world, during this transition time for Dance Theatre of Harlem with his passing?

Claudia Schreier

Obviously, the responsibility, and the honor of creating a work for Dance Theatre of Harlem is something that I felt immediately before anything else transpired. And, of course, we didn't know how imminent his death was to be. It came, I think, as a surprise to a lot of us and so, you know, we're already in communication and this ballet was in development, before his passing. But the weight of this immense loss, it goes so far beyond the loss of one individual. He is an extraordinary, larger than life figure who transformed the face of ballet in America, ballet for Black people, ballet for everyone. And so to know that this work, that speaks to the history and the legacy of the Black experience, would be in conversation with this larger company history and narrative just made it all the more meaningful and I carried that with me throughout for sure.

Dr. Jennifer Gómez

So could each of you speak to the experiences of being Black women, artists, creators, composer, in what is traditionally a white man dominated field? Even though ballet in the arts is largely women dominated, those in positions of power and really dictating the creation of the arts is men. What was that like for each of you being Black women and working on your own and with each other for Passage?
Jessie Montgomery
I've probably faced the most complicated moments about being a Black female artist during the time we're in now more than I had as a kid, or growing up and coming through. I've been very fortunate in my career in terms of having opportunities to develop my art but in terms of dealing with the big structural aspects of classical music, it's the institution's questions about me that have been the problem for me. The institution wonders why I'm there and they keep asking me why I'm there. That's the issue. Why me? Why is classical music interesting to you? And the reason classical music is interesting to me or that I've had access to it, well in my case, is because I grew up in New York City. I had access to so much stuff by being in a major, urban metropolis and feel like that's a unique question for me.

Claudia Schreier
It is difficult to put into words only because as the larger conversation evolves around Blackness, and everything that it entails, it's such a personal journey that one has been called upon to speak to, universally. And I am in such a different headspace, in terms of my relationship to my identity, than I was when we had this conversation back in February compared to where I was when we started the piece. We were talking about this in like 2016, 2017. The personal, private evolution of myself and my character and my relationship with Jessie, my relationship with my family, my relationship to teach, my relationship to the world, I mean, it goes on and on and on. I can see my perspective on the ballet itself change and shift simply because of that. And much like Jessie, we both come from classical backgrounds, classical training, and we both have, I believe, this passion and this impetus to push the outcome forward but still lay claim to our background and to express appreciation for our background.

Dr. Jennifer Gómez
It's kind of helpful to think that the things that we do and the things that we're fighting for, you know, can live beyond us and the people who come up behind us can kind of carry the torch. So in thinking about Passage and everything we've talked about so far, what do you hope that audience members, when the world is back open again and they're all lined up in the theater, what do you hope audience members take away from Passage?
Claudia Schreier

I hope they take away hope. The mere fact to be sitting in a theater again, together, sharing live dance and live music and live performance, ideally, on the other end of this devastating pandemic, the fact that we can all do that means that there is hope and things can move forward and move upward. To be able to share in that experience together would be immensely gratifying and so humbling. And I would just give anything to be able to share that again with people.

Jessie Montgomery

Same! I can't wait to see a live dance performance in a theater, all huddled together with the lights low and not knowing what’s coming. That’ll be a great moment for everyone. I hope that people see what we know and to be confirmed in that. And to know that the work is not done and that we’re growing immensely, but that there’s just a lot to do. We have to support each other coming into the space and being with the performers. Being an audience member means so much to the future of the art form and thereby so much to these artists. If you want to support Black art, come see Passage.

The fifty-three-year history of Dance Theatre of Harlem is a landscape of peaks and valleys inhabited by a race of dreamers, achievers, and yes, history makers. DTH co-founder Arthur Mitchell was all the above as well as premier danseur, choreographer, and teacher. We used to call him “our fearless leader” because he marched forward never thinking that what he sought to do would have been impossible for anyone else. His passing in 2018 left us bereft but determined that the institution he and Karel Shook incorporated on February 11, 1969, will endure and thrive.

Arthur Mitchell believed in the power of art to change lives and open minds. The DTH Company, School, and our arts education program, “Dancing Through Barriers,” became the manifestation of that idea. While the School and DTB served the Harlem community, with the Company, Arthur Mitchell was able to take his vision across the globe. The DTH Company, a mix of African Americans, Hispanics, Asians and Caucasians, was a vivid demonstration of the premise that the art form of classical ballet belongs to us all.

The social impact of Dance Theatre of Harlem’s national and international touring for more than 50 years is often noted, but as significant is the depth and breadth of the company’s artistic prowess. With a repertoire that ranges from Mitchell’s own neoclassical works (he learned his craft at George Balanchine’s knee, after all), historic Ballet Russes, classics such as Scheherazade and Les Noces, to great American narrative works such as Billy The Kid, Fall River Legend, and the groundbreaking productions of Creole Giselle and Firebird that linger in the collective consciousness, throughout its history Dance Theatre of Harlem has expanded the notion of what ballet can be.

Karel Shook played a key role as teacher and mentor to African American dance artists in New York in the 1950s. In addition to cofounding Dance Theatre of Harlem with Arthur Mitchell in 1969, he also was a ballet master, choreographer, and author. Born in 1920, Mr. Shook was a native of Renton, Washington. Encouraged to study ballet, at age 13 he was a protégé of Nellie Cornish and received a scholarship to the Cornish School of Allied Arts in Seattle. While his performance career was brief, he appeared on Broadway and danced with the Ballet Russe de Monte Carlo and New York City Ballet. Mr. Shook’s brief performance career led to teaching and choreographing, mainly in Europe but also in New York. In the early 50s he opened Studio Arts, one of the few dance studios in the city where African Americans could study ballet. Among his students were Carmen de Lavallade, Pearl Primus, Geoffrey Holder, Louis Johnson, Alvin Ailey, and Arthur Mitchell, who first came to him at age 17. Mr. Shook left New York in 1959 to become the ballet master of the Dutch National Ballet, where he was when his former student, Arthur Mitchell, asked him to return to New York to help create the Dance Theatre of Harlem. Mr. Shook was an advocate of the universality of classical ballet. His book, Elements of Classical Ballet explores the development of classical ballet in such countries across the globe as China, Turkey, Iran, Japan, Cuba, and Mexico. In 1980 he was awarded the United States Presidential Award for “Excellence and Dedication in Education.”
Arthur Mitchell was known around the world for creating and sustaining the Dance Theatre of Harlem, the internationally acclaimed ballet company he co-founded with Karel Shook in 1969. Following a brilliant career as a principal artist with the New York City Ballet, Mr. Mitchell dedicated his life to changing perceptions and advancing the art form of ballet through the first permanently established African American and racially diverse ballet company.

Born in New York City in 1934, Mr. Mitchell began his dance training at New York City’s High School of the Performing Arts, where he won the coveted annual dance award and subsequently a full scholarship to the School of American Ballet. In 1955, he became the first male African American to become a permanent member of a major ballet company when he joined New York City Ballet. Mr. Mitchell rose quickly to the rank of Principal Dancer during his fifteen-year career with New York City Ballet and electrified audiences with his performances in a broad spectrum of roles. Upon learning of the death of Reverend Dr. Martin Luther King, Jr. and with financial assistance from Mrs. Alva B. Gimbel, the Ford Foundation and his own savings, Mr. Mitchell founded Dance Theatre of Harlem with his mentor and ballet instructor Karel Shook.

With an illustrious career that has spanned over fifty years, Mr. Mitchell is the recipient of the Kentucky Center Honors, a National Medal of the Arts, a MacArthur Foundation Fellowship, the New York Living Landmark Award, the Handel Medallion, the NAACP Image Award, and more than a dozen honorary degrees.

A native of Washington, D.C., Ms. Johnson began her training with Therrell Smith. She studied with Mary Day at the Washington School of Ballet and graduated from the Academy of the Washington School of Ballet and went on to be a University Scholar in the School of the Arts at New York University before joining Dance Theatre of Harlem.

Virginia Johnson is universally recognized as one of the great ballerinas of her generation and is perhaps best known for her performances in the ballets Giselle, A Streetcar Named Desire, and Fall River Legend. THE DAVID DICHIERA ARTISTIC FUND

In remembrance of our founder and long-term general director, The David DiChiera Artistic Fund has been established to support and honor his artistic vision.

This fund enables Michigan Opera Theatre to produce compelling opera, present innovative dance, and engage with thousands of students and members of our community through our educational and outreach programs. Most importantly, it allows MOT to preserve David’s legacy and his dedication to the young people of Southeast Michigan and young emerging artists from all over the country.

Michigan Opera Theatre gratefully acknowledges the generous corporate, foundation, and individual donors whose gifts to The David DiChiera Artistic Fund were made before December 31, 2021.

CAPITAL CAMPAIGN FOR THE DETROIT OPERA HOUSE

The Michigan Opera Theatre Board of Directors began the first phase of fundraising for Detroit Opera House capital improvements in January 2020. This multi-phase capital campaign grew from recommendations identified in the facilities master plan completed by Albert Kahn Associates, Inc. Scheduled facility improvements and upgrades will shape the patron experience at the Opera House for years to come.

We look forward to sharing full details about the capital campaign in the coming months. Until then, we extend heartfelt thanks to the following donors who made contributions that enabled capital improvements to begin.

*Listing reflects gifts and pledges as of December 31, 2021 in alphabetical order.
Imagine a gift that outlives you, allowing future generations to experience and enjoy the world of opera and dance. That’s the goal of the Avanti Society, Michigan Opera Theatre’s planned gift recognition program.

The Italian word avanti means “ahead,” or “forward.” Michigan Opera Theatre’s Avanti Society represents a designated group of friends who have made plans to include MOT in their estates — whether by will, trust, insurance, or life income arrangement. We are grateful for the generosity and foresight of those listed below, who have chosen to declare their intentions and join the Avanti Society.

Thank You Avanti Society Members!
