Michigan Opera Theatre
Welcome to the Detroit Opera House and the second half of our 2016-17 dance season sponsored by our friends at the Lear Corporation. We are delighted to present distinct performances featuring Eisenhower Dance, performing with ezdanza and State Street Ballet, the Royal Winnipeg Ballet and the return of the Alvin Ailey American Dance Theater.

This season is bittersweet for us, as we honor the memory of our longtime Director of Dance, Carol Halsted, in whose name we dedicate the Eisenhower performance. Carol was instrumental in planning major dance seasons and events during her more than decade of service to Michigan Opera Theatre (MOT). Her work included nurturing our partnerships with leading dance companies that have enabled us to present exceptional dance performances in Metro Detroit.

We are pleased to affirm our commitment to dance programs that take place beyond the Detroit Opera House through community partnerships that extend into schools and stages throughout the region. We are currently in the second year of our three-year partnership with University Musical Society. Together, we presented the Mark Morris Dance Group in October and will share the Alvin Ailey Revelations Residency with the Ann Arbor community at Scarlett Middle School in March. Further, we are pleased to partner with Ballet Detroit, a dance school in residence at the Opera House for young aspiring dancers under the artistic leadership of Sergey Rayevskiy, supported in part by the Greater Wayne County Chapter of the Links. These are examples of exceptional dance activities taking place in our region that we will continue to nurture and celebrate in future seasons.

There are a number of significant upcoming announcements, including the announcement of our 2017-18 season that will highlight an expanded range of dance presentations. In addition, next season will feature Stephen Lord, our Principal Conductor, leading several opera presentations. MOT seeks to build on the solid foundation laid by our founder David DiChiera and to strive for even greater artistic success going forward. A subscription insures that you experience all the exciting performances, offers preferred seating along with early access to special events, giving you the best value over single ticket purchases.

Finally, I wish to invite you to a very special evening on May 19, 2017 for the DiChiera Grand Salute. This will mark a capstone event for our founder David DiChiera. It will be a star-studded performance with artists from around the globe sharing their incredible artistry. This is a once-in-a-lifetime opportunity you won’t want to miss.

We hope you enjoy today’s performance and will join us again and again!

Warm wishes,

Wayne S. Brown
President and CEO, Michigan Opera Theatre

 COMPANY HISTORY

Eisenhower Dance has spent the last 25 years giving life to the repertoire of internationally known choreographers, as well as the highly acclaimed work of Artistic Director Laurie Eisenhower. Established in metro Detroit by Eisenhower in 1991, the Company presents an annual subscription series and tours internationally. The company has performed works by the renowned choreographers Edgar Zendejas, David Parsons, Lar Lubovitch, Ron de Jesus, Gina Patterson, Lauren Edson and Harrison McEldowney, to name a few. The Company’s mission of collaboration has resulted in performances with Michigan Opera Theatre, the Great Lakes Chamber Music Festival, the Warren Symphony, the Immigrant Suns, Detroit Chamber Winds & Strings, the Rackham Symphony Choir, the Motor City Lyric Opera and the Toledo Opera, among others. Eisenhower Dance has produced several full-evening length touring productions, including Motown in Motion, a visual salute to the tunes that made Motown Records famous; The Rite of Spring set to Igor Stravinsky’s iconic score; and the Company’s newest production, The Light Show, which pairs four choreographers with four lighting designers for a visually stunning evening of dance. Considered by many critics to be one of the finest contemporary dance companies in the nation, Eisenhower Dance has received overwhelming critical acclaim: “stunning” (Gloria Shay, Holland Sentinel), “intelligently crafted repertoire” (Susan Isaacs-Nisbett, Dance Magazine), “dance that touches the soul” (Susan Hall-Balduf, Detroit Free Press), “an eye-popping production” (David Lyman, Detroit Free Press), and “a hearty, no-nonsense way of moving” (Jack Anderson, The New York Times). The Company will culminate this season with performances at the prestigious Tel Aviv Performing Arts Center in Israel and several cities in Poland.

ezdanza is an ensemble of talented dancers that perform the work of Mexican-born choreographer Edgar Zendejas. Founded in January 2006 by Zendejas, along with dancers Julien Gagnon and Neelanthi Vadivel, the company’s focus is on research, creation and dissemination. Edgar Zendejas has over 17 years of experience as a choreographer and he continues to fulfill demands choreographically in Canada and abroad. ezdanza has performed at Jacob’s Pillow Dance Festival, Douglas Anderson School of the Arts (Jacksonville, FL), Alabama School of Fine Arts (Birmingham, AL), Art and Culture Center of Hollywood, Florida, Busan International Beach Dance Festival (South Korea), Guelph Contemporary Dance Festival (Ontario), Festival Danse Encore, Festival des Arts de St-Sauveur, and Domaine Forget (Quebec), Dance Sampler, APAP (New York City), and Festival Danza UNAM (Mexico City). The vision of ezdanza is to reach audiences with multiple messages through contemporary dance and to convey each individual to a place of deeper recognition according to their own personality and cultural background.

State Street Ballet is a vibrant, innovative professional ballet company based in Santa Barbara, California. Founded in 1994 by former American Ballet Theatre dancer Rodney Gustafson, the company combines the discipline and timeless elegance of classical ballet with updated, cutting-edge choreography, producing original works that satisfy today’s diverse audiences. By melding familiar storylines with exciting dance movement and multi-media visuals, the company gives each tale a modern and unique twist, introducing dance as mainstream entertainment while honoring classical traditions. Choreographers whose works have been performed by State Street Ballet include Robert Battle, Autumn Eckman, Peter Pucci, Margo Sappington, Josie Walsh, and Edgar Zendejas, as well as the legendary Agnes de Mille and George Balanchine. Innovative new works draw from a team of visionary resident choreographers including Artistic Director Rodney Gustafson, Emmy Award winner Robert Sund, and renowned New York-based choreographer William Soleau. State Street Ballet tours both nationally and internationally, boasting a 90% rebooking rate, rave reviews, and standing ovations around the world. The summer of 2015 saw the company embark on a nine-week tour throughout China, performing Beauty and the Beast in 25 different cities - a crowning achievement of State Street Ballet's 20th Anniversary Season.

SYNOPSIS

Time: 1957

ACT I

Prologue:
The hum of the television is an almost constant presence and source of delight for Nancy, a solitary young woman whose mother has passed away and whose father is frequently gone on business. Although she is often alone, she is not lonely: she has the companionship of her faithful dog and the household staff, all of whom dote on her. And she spends hours in front of the television, which sparks her imagination – particularly the announcement of the upcoming broadcast of Rodgers and Hammerstein’s Cinderella.

Scene I: The Family Estate
The servants busy themselves, happily preparing for the return of Nancy’s father from his most recent trip. No one is more excited than Nancy. But a chill descends when she sees that her father is not alone: he is accompanied by a new wife, her two daughters and her ever-present cat. The new family uneasily gets acquainted.

Nancy discovers that her father must leave again on business, and they bid each other a bittersweet goodbye. The servants, having been inhumanely overworked by the stepmother, are so frizzled that they quit. Nancy is left with the responsibility of cleaning the house. Her stepsisters are enjoying the television, now in their control, when the program they are watching is interrupted with tragic news.

Scene II: The Family Estate – A Few Days Later
The stepfamily devises a plan to poison the dog, who outsmarts them and escapes. Nancy searches for him, to no avail. Her search is interrupted when the doorbell rings and a messenger appears with invitations to the big winter dance.

Scene III: Arthur Murray Dance Studio
The stepfamily heads off to a dance class, to brush up on their skills before the big event. The stepmother forbids Nancy from attending, but she defiantly follows them. The class is in progress when a handsome young man named Bob appears in the doorway. Every woman in the room is spellbound. All the women vie for his attention, none more so than Nancy.

Scene IV: The Family Estate
The stepmother and stepsisters primp and prepare for the big evening. As the three women are about to leave, Nancy emerges from her room, ready to accompany them. But her stepmother orders her to stay home and continue working. Left alone, Nancy cannot hide her desolation. In the depths of her misery, her godmother appears.

Scene V: A Garden
The godmother uses her special gifts to transport Nancy to a magical garden filled with enchanting creatures – all of whom look vaguely familiar. Together with the godmother, the animals lovingly transform Nancy into the belle of the ball. The godmother warns her that she must leave the dance before midnight, for at that time the magic will reverse itself. The girl happily agrees, and under the light of a blue moon, departs for the dance.

ACT II

Scene I: The Starlight Ballroom
The dance is in full swing when Bob makes his entrance; once again he takes over the room. At last Nancy arrives, and time seems to stop. She appears vaguely familiar to Bob, and as he gazes on her now, he is smitten. When at last they meet, they heat up the evening with a torrid pas de deux.
Nancy and Bob have eyes only for each other. Nancy loses track of time, and is shocked when she hears the first of twelve gongs counting down to midnight. As the last gong sounds, she runs into the open elevator with Bob in pursuit.

Scene II: A Corner of the Estate/ Somewhere in a Park
Unbeknownst to each other, Bob and Nancy simultaneously reminisce about the evening and their lost love.

Scene III: The Family Estate
It’s the day after the dance, and the stepsisters, consumed by jealousy, torment Nancy with renewed vigor. As the stepmother intervenes, they all stop to listen to a special television announcement about a handsome young heir who is asking his mystery woman to rendezvous with him that evening in the ballroom.

The stepmother and stepsisters have the same thought: they cannot let Nancy out of the house. Before the unsuspecting girl realizes what is happening, the stepfamily is upon her and ties her up. They believe what is happening, the stepfamily is that with Nancy out of the way, they have a chance with Bob.

Scene IV: The Ballroom
Bob is alone in the ballroom, when the elevator doors open and a mob of young women swoop down on him. Each girl has done her best to look like Nancy, in the belief that she can trick Bob into believing she is his lost love. But no one dances like his mystery woman. Suddenly the elevator doors open again and Nancy appears.

Scene V: A Garden
The godmother, with assistance from the animals, again transforms the surroundings into a magnificent outdoor setting. A gold moon shines down. As the stepmother and her daughters leave town, Nancy and Bob settle in to watch Rodgers and Hammerstein’s Cinderella.

. . . . And they lived happily ever after.

The March 18th performance is dedicated to the memory of Dr. Kim Lie, Michigan Opera Theatre Trustee 1981-2017.

Dr. Kim Lie, M.D., was a lover and active patron of the arts who had served as member of the Michigan Opera Theatre Board of Trustees since 1981. As a Trustee, Kim was a volunteer with the Dance Council, Michigan Opera Theatre Volunteer Association and Opera League. He enjoyed the theatre and ballet and was especially fond of live performances of opera, classical and jazz music. In addition to Michigan Opera Theatre, Kim supported other local fine arts institutions, including Detroit Symphony Orchestra and the Detroit Institute of Arts. In honor of his commitment and contribution to Michigan Opera Theatre, the March 18th performance of A Cinderella Story is dedicated to his memory. Dr. Kim Lie, 1932 – 2016.
To every age, its own Cinderella. Which of us has not grown up fondly attached to one version or another of the lovely old story? In 17th-century France, a child might have heard it at the hearthside, on her grandmother’s knee. Operaphiles of the 19th century could listen to the soot-stained girl warbling dreamily, whether she was called Cendrillon (in Massenet’s version), or Cenerentola (in Rossini’s). And American kids of the 20th century delighted in a series of lush and fantastic takes—Disney’s 1950 heroine (“Cinderelly!”), with her posse of adoring mice, and the sparkling tele-musical of Rodgers and Hammerstein, produced anew three times, for new generations of youngsters; with honey-voiced Julie Andrews in 1957, spunky Lesley Ann Warren in 1965 and Brandy in 1997 being assured that nothing is “impossible” by her fairy godmother, Whitney Houston!

Now, those lucky enough to attend A Cinderella Story at the Detroit Opera House have a whole new adaptation to call their own. In the piece, created by American choreographer Val Caniparoli and premiered by the Royal Winnipeg Ballet in 2004, we meet a Cinderella — now called “Nancy” — who does not sing or speak but does cartwheel to the rollicking rhythm of a big band playing swing adaptations of Richard Rodgers’ music.

But wait a moment. Cartwheel? Isn’t this ballet? Yes! And yes!

Artistic Director André Lewis said the piece combines classical movement with a midcentury American dance vocabulary.

“There is a section in the big ballroom scene when the girls are grabbed and they do a cartwheel in the air. Now that’s not classical!” he said. “But then they go back to a piqué arabesque or a pirouette. It’s a melding of the two styles, so that there’s still the familiarity that ballet’s all about, while also exploring new territories.”

The new territory of this telling is a candy-colored dream of the 1950s, with the heroine getting her romantic notions not from a storybook or from the chatter of a chubby mouse, but rather from television commercials. She is a bright modern girl and not one for losing her shoes—just see what the creative team has done with that immortal moment. Watch, also, for the conjuring of a magic Chevy convertible that transports Nancy to the ball. Suffice it to say that it is not transfigured from a pumpkin.

At that ball (in this version, “the big winter dance,” at which Nancy meets her Prince Charming, “Bob”), the ladies’ pirouettes are given an extra twirl by the full Dior-esque skirts, and the dancers’ long-arching lines are made even longer with the addition of satin evening gloves, all inspired by actual 1950s couture designs and re-imagined for this production by Sandra Woodall. Lewis said the costumes remind him of the bright stars of Old Hollywood.

“You have a reference to the Audrey Hepburn era,” he said. “There was a chicness about that era.”

The Royal Winnipeg Ballet’s adaptation came about when Lewis approached Caniparoli to create a new Cinderella for his company, one that might use unexpected music, with an unexpected setting. Caniparoli had been working on a tango pas de deux set to a Rodgers tune and the idea hit him: a ballet performed entirely to Rodgers’ music, with a suitably retro mise-en-scène. The catch? None of the music would actually be from his iconic Cinderella score with Oscar Hammerstein, but instead, would draw from his other musicals, some written with Hammerstein and others with Lorenz Hart, all updated with big band arrangements by Winnipeg bandleader Ron Paley. The result is a score that is romantic, sexy, instantly appealing, and with a touch of whimsy, too.

The company ended up with what Lewis proudly calls “a jewel of a work,” one that is both ballet and bebop, both age-old fairy tale and 20th-century frolic.

“It’s a lot of fun,” Lewis said, “but there’s still real, true artistry, and such poignancy when she finally meets him again and they’re reconnected.”

For such happy reconnecting as this — Nancy with her Bob, us with a new-old Cinderella to take to our hearts — we are willing to stay at the sock hop until long past the stroke of midnight.

ABOUT THE COMPANY
Alvin Ailey American Dance Theater grew from a now-fabled performance in March 1958 at the 92nd Street Y in New York City. Led by Alvin Ailey and a group of young African-American modern dancers, that performance changed forever the perception of American dance. The Ailey company has gone on to perform for an estimated 25 million people at theaters in 48 states and 71 countries on six continents—and has reached millions more through television broadcasts, film screenings, and online platforms. In 2008, a U.S. Congressional resolution designated the Company as “a vital American cultural ambassador to the world” that celebrates the uniqueness of the African-American cultural experience and the preservation and enrichment of the American modern dance heritage. When Mr. Ailey began creating dances, he drew upon his “blood memories” of Texas, the blues, spirituals, and gospel as inspiration, which resulted in the creation of his most popular and critically acclaimed work, Revelations. Although he created 79 ballets over his lifetime, Mr. Ailey maintained that his company was not exclusively a repository for his own work. Today the Company continues Mr. Ailey’s mission by presenting important works of the past and commissioning new ones. In all, more than 235 works by more than 90 choreographers have been part of the Ailey company’s repertory. Before his untimely death in 1989, Mr. Ailey named Judith Jamison as his successor, and over the next 21 years she brought the Company to unprecedented success. Ms. Jamison, in turn, personally selected Robert Battle to succeed her in 2011, and The New York Times declared he “has injected the company with new life.”

Robert Battle became artistic director of Alvin Ailey American Dance Theater in July 2011 after being personally selected by Judith Jamison, making him only the third person to head the Company since it was founded in 1958. Mr. Battle has a longstanding association with the Ailey organization. A frequent choreographer and artist-in-residence at Ailey since 1999, he has set many of his works on Alvin Ailey American Dance Theater and Ailey II, and at The Ailey School. Alvin Ailey
Founder
Alvin Ailey was born on January 5, 1931, in Rogers, Texas. His experiences of life in the rural South would later inspire some of his most memorable works. He was introduced to dance in Los Angeles by performances of the Ballet Russe de Monte Carlo and the Katherine Dunham Dance Company, and his formal dance training began with an introduction to Lester Horton's classes by his friend Carmen de Lavallade. Horton, the founder of one of the first racially-integrated dance companies in the United States, became a mentor for Mr. Ailey as he embarked on his professional career. After Horton’s death in 1953, Mr. Ailey became director of the Lester Horton Dance Theater and began to choreograph his own works. In the 1950s and 60s, Mr. Ailey performed in four Broadway shows, including House of Flowers and Jamaica. In 1958, he founded Alvin Ailey American Dance Theater to carry out his vision of a company dedicated to enriching the American modern dance heritage and preserving the uniqueness of the African-American cultural experience. He established the Alvin Ailey American Dance Center (now The Ailey School) in 1969 and formed the Alvin Ailey Repertory Ensemble (now Ailey II) in 1974. Mr. Ailey was a pioneer of programs promoting arts in education, particularly those benefiting underserved communities. Throughout his lifetime he was awarded numerous distinctions, including the Kennedy Center Honor in 1988 in recognition of his extraordinary contribution to American culture. In 2014, he posthumously received the Presidential Medal of Freedom, the country’s highest civilian honor, in recognition of his contributions and commitment to civil rights and dance in America. When Mr. Ailey died on December 1, 1989, The New York Times said of him, “you didn’t need to have known [him] personally to have been touched by his humanity, enthusiasm, and exuberance and his courageous stand for multi-racial brotherhood.”

Judith Jamison
Artistic Director Emerita
Judith Jamison joined Alvin Ailey American Dance Theater in 1965 and quickly became an international star. In 2004, under Ms. Jamison’s artistic directorship, her idea of a permanent home for the Ailey company was realized and named after beloved chairman emerita Joan Weill. Ms. Jamison continues to dedicate herself to asserting the prominence of the arts in our culture and she remains committed to promoting the significance of the Ailey legacy—using dance as a medium for honoring the past, celebrating the present, and fearlessly reaching into the future.

DiChiera DiConstructed:
THE IMPRESARIO
BY ERICA HOBBS

For Michigan Opera Theatre, Founder and Artistic Director Dr. David DiChiera, opera is a living, breathing art. In a tradition known for reprising and celebrating great works of the past, DiChiera saw opera as a continual exploration of the human experience, one that should continue to evolve to reflect the present age as well as the diverse cultures in which it resides. He also identified the need to encourage young talent and to support and grow performance spaces to preserve the art form.

Throughout his career, DiChiera has been Founder, General Director and Artistic Director of Michigan Opera Theatre (MOT). He has also been Founder and General Director of Opera Pacific in Orange County, California and Artistic Director of Ohio’s Dayton Opera Association, the only general director to run three opera companies at the same time. He also served as president of OPERA America from 1979-1983.

Throughout all of these positions, DiChiera held true to a vision of opera that serves the people and moves forward with the times.

Championing artists of color, mentoring the next generation of singers and supporting Detroit’s revitalization were priorities for establishing MOT.

“One of the important things is that I wanted an opera company that reflected our city,” he said. “And so, from the very beginning for me, [the operas] were all based on diversity.”

Throughout his time at Michigan Opera Theatre, DiChiera produced a range of diverse operas including Treemonisha, (African-American), Anoush (Armenian), King Roger (Polish), The Passenger (Jewish) and Frida (Mexican), among others. He commissioned and produced the world premiere of Margaret Garner, a pre-Civil War opera based on Toni Morrison’s “Beloved,” with Morrison herself writing the libretto. Additionally, DiChiera personally nurtured the careers of numerous African-American artists such as Kathleen Battle, native Detroiter Maria Ewing, Leona Mitchell and Vinson Cole.

Throughout the past four decades, DiChiera has dedicated himself to the mentoring and development of young artists, culminating in the establishment of the Michigan Opera Theatre Studio residency program, which provides advanced training and performance opportunities for emerging talent. The program provides five up-and-coming singers opportunities to perform at a range of venues from board meetings to community events to their own full-length opera while receiving master-level industry training and networking. Now in its second year, MOT Studio Artists can be found in Opera Antwerpan, Toledo Opera, Santa Fe Opera, Eugene Opera, and the Glimmerglass Festival, among others.

Feeling a great sense of civic duty, DiChiera was determined that Detroit, as a major metropolitan city — even one suffering tremendous population loss in the early 70s — had an opera company and one that resided in the city proper as part of its cultural center. His work did more than build an opera company, it created a community that encouraged the development of its surroundings and the establishment of Detroit as a destination. DiChiera saved two theaters: Music Hall in 1971 and Grand Circus Theater, transformed into the modern day Detroit Opera House in 1996. The theaters sparked the growth of the development around them, including the stadiums, businesses, restaurants and residences that make up Detroit’s entertainment district.

“I just kept saying, ‘We’re doing it because this is a great city, and a great city needs to have all of its cultural institutions,’” DiChiera said. “That was the way I simply forged ahead and ignored the naysayers.”

DiChiera’s vision to promote the growth of opera spread beyond his leadership at MOT. When DiChiera started as president of OPERA America in the late 1970s, few new operas were being presented in the United States. Under his leadership, the organization established two programs to encourage the development of new works. “Opera for the 80s and Beyond” encouraged the development of new opera and musical theater. “Opera for a New America” supported companies’ outreach to underserved communities. By the mid-90s, 20-25 new works were consistently being produced by American opera companies.

In 2010, DiChiera received the Opera Honors Award from the National Endowment for the Arts, the highest honor in the country for achievement in opera. In 2013, he was named a Kresge Eminent Artist by the Kresge Foundation, an honor that recognizes personal achievement and community impact through the arts in Southeast Michigan.

In a career spanning nearly five decades, DiChiera has run three opera companies, saved two theaters and created numerous programs that encouraged the growth of the art form to new frontiers and new audiences. As he winds down his tenure, he leaves the next generation of opera leadership a solid foundation on which to continue to build upon.

Greetings from the MOT Volunteer Association.

I have been an opera lover for many years and Michigan Opera Theatre is very important to me. Our MOTVA volunteers provide the company with a tremendous level of support. We have more than 700 members who serve as ushers, tour guides, and Boutique volunteers. Our Divas and Divos provide artist hospitality, and the Opera League and Dance Council members hold parties to celebrate moments such as opening night performances. Our members logged almost 20,000 volunteer hours last year. Bravi!!

If you are not yet a volunteer please consider joining us! Volunteering is a great way to meet other interesting and involved patrons, and your MOTVA membership is tax deductible. For membership information please view the MOTVA web page at www.michiganopera.org/working-with-us/volunteer or call Rachele Wright at 313.237.3402. Rachele would be happy to speak with you and connect you with those volunteering in support of Michigan Opera Theatre.

This season we are celebrating the creation of Michigan Opera Theatre, as we honor the career of our Founder and Artistic Director, David DiChiera. His vision of an opera company for Michigan and an Opera House in Detroit first took shape 46 years ago. Many, many volunteers have traveled this journey with Dr. DiChiera, assuring the success of this company. To those who currently support us through the generous support of your gifts of time, I offer my sincere thanks. To those reading about our volunteer program for the first time, please consider joining.

Sincerely,

Terry Shea, President, MOTVA

are trained to lead you out of the building safely. A trained Emergency Medical Technician (EMT) is onsite during most events. Please see an usher or staff member to contact the EMT.
